In this picture we can see how devastated Chanda is after finding out that Esther is a prostitute. After Chanda confronts Esther about this, Esther confesses that she has been pleasing other men in order to be able to bring her family back together. But towards the beginning of the book, she tells Chanda that she wants to meet a rich man, and leave this place behind. This is an example of how she can be two-faced.

This scene tells the reader in an indirect way how devastated Chanda's mother was. Mrs. Tafa called a spiritual doctor to see if she could help out Chanda's mother out in any way. This doctor starts to recite spiritual sentences, and then out of the blue, she punches Chanda's mother right in the stomach. This is an important scene, because it gives Chanda's family hope once again. After this reunion, Chanda's mother packs her bags, and is getting ready to go back to Tiro, and to try and find a solution to all of her problems.
